Flue-Cured Growers Advised About Marketing Cards

Mr. J. P. Alvis, Jr., Chairman, Appomattox County ASC Committee, today reminded flue-cured tobacco growers about the use of tobacco marketing cards under the acreage-poundage program. Mr. Alvis said, "To protect themselves, growers should carefully follow the procedures for marketing tobacco, thereby safeguarding their marketing card from misuse."

A marketing card is issued, by the County ASCS Office, for each farm to identify the tobacco marketed from that farm. Upon written request, more than one card will be issued to each farm.

At the beginning of the marketing season, the card, or cards will show the total amount of tobacco which can be marketed during the season. Whenever tobacco is marketed the producer must present his card when he leaves tobacco at the warehouse. The card will then remain in the warehouse until the sale is made and the producer settles for his tobacco.

"The first point I want to stress," Chairman Alvis said, "is that each grower be sure that his marketing card is returned when he settles for each sale. A requirement prohibits leaving the marketing card at the warehouse once a sale is completed. Next, the grower should check the pounds of the sale on his sales ticket against the pounds recorded on the back of his card. The difference between the last two entries on the card will give the pounds last sold. Remember, the grower is responsible for his card, and should make sure that the pounds last sold. Remember, the pounds entered on it match the sales ticket. Any tobacco marketings above 110 percent of the farm quota will be considered excess tobacco and the producer will be responsible for any marketing quota penalty due.

Mr. Alvis stated, "Another grower responsibility is to make sure that his marketing card is returned to the county ASCS office as soon as he has finished marketing his tobacco. The card should be returned immediately upon completion of marketings, even though the markets are still open."

Mr. Alvis said that members of the county committee and county office staff are available to explain any aspect of tobacco marketing card use. He said, "Our main concern is that farmers understand the rules so they can market all the tobacco they're entitled to market. All a producer has to remember are the procedures I've outlined, and that the marketing card is to be used only for tobacco from the farm for which it was issued. There are usually only two reasons why farmers have difficulty with their marketing card, they don't understand the correct procedure, or in a small percentage of cases they attempt to falsely identify tobacco by using someone else's card."

"We don't like to talk about penalties," Mr. Alvis said, "but when violations do occur the committee is obliged to assess the penalties prescribed by law and program regulations. The penalties for tobacco falsely identified are a reduction in your next year's allotment and assessment of heavy marketing quota penalties. In addition, violators may be subject to criminal or civil fraud prosecution.

The Pastor Speaks

You Are Good For Something

This is a message to those Christians who suffer from a spiritual "inferiority complex!"

Many Christians look at talented individuals who sing, teach, and witness for Christ with seeming ease and say, "My, but I wish I had the abilities that they have." Because they are outshined and outperformed by other gifted workers, these people conclude that they simply don't have it, are spiritually useless, and thus develop a spiritual "inferiority complex."

It is true that there are individuals in a church who are more gifted than others. We need to accept this and not burn with jealousy toward these gifted ones.

No business or large corporation is run by merely one man. There may be a sales department, a customer relations department, a manufacturing department, an advertising department, a research department and on ad infinitum. In a business the leading salesman and the top executive get much more attention than the mechanic who oils the machinery to keep it running. Both groups of people are equally vital in keeping the business running on a smooth keel.

The same application is true in a church, a group of God's people. No church can exist merely on singing. No church can exist merely on teaching. There must be doing. No church can exist merely on evangelism. There must also be the encouraging and strengthening of God's people. In the background behind singers, teachers, and talented preachers God has placed a host of "ordinary" folks whose works are just as vital to the growth of a church as the mechanic is to a corporation or the artist is to an advertising department. Paul speaks of them in terms of "apostles, prophets, teachers, helps, and governments" in 1 Corinthians 12:28. He means that in a church we need people who are witnesses of Christ's saving power, people who encourage faint-hearted Christians, people who ourselves and thus give to men the sovereignty and allegiance that belongs to God alone. We look to human beings with divine expectations and are thus doomed to disappointment in our political life.

Paul was not the first Biblical writer to sound this warning. We find this same concern in 1 Samuel. You will remember that when the Israelites entered the land of Canaan under Joshua, they then dispersed throughout the land, each tribe settling in its own designated territory. During the period of the Judges, other Israelites formed a loose confederacy of independent tribes. When the tribes were threatened with grave danger from time to time, they would cooperate briefly under the leadership of men like Gideon.

From these experiences of cooperation came a growing desire for a more permanent unity in the form of a centralized government. They wanted to abandon the confederacy and replace it with a monarchy. They had seen the kingdoms of their neighbors and witnessed all that could be accomplished with a strong central government. So they clamored for a king.

To Fight Our Battles

Samuel, their spiritual leader, vigorously opposed this request. Yet, when he had his say, "the people refused to listen to the voice of Samuel; and they said, 'Not so; but we will have a king over us that we also will be like all the nations, and that our king may judge us, and go out before us, and fight our battles.'" Still Samuel resisted until at last the Lord intervened and told Samuel, "Hearken to their voice and make them a king."

Now this story does not mean that the whole Old Testament is pessimistic about the establishment of a monarchy, but it does indicate that throughout the Old Testament there is a recurring uneasiness about it. Not that government in itself was evil; it was what men did with their governmental institutions. Among all the ancient peoples, therefore, the Hebrews were among the first to regard the monarchy, not as a divine institution handed down from heaven, but as one quite human. Though they realized the need for these human institutions, they also fully recognized the tendency of these institutions to become a substitute for God.

History's Confirmation

How often history has confirmed the judgment of both Paul and Samuel. Not only has there been a willingness on the part of man to assume the role of political messiah, but there has also been an even greater willingness on the part of the great masses of people to commit to them an almost superhuman or divine nature.

Samuel warned the people about this great self-deception and then helped them to choose a king. This is instructive for us, too: let us ask his aid in choosing our leaders, but when we have cast our ballots, let us not fail to continue to serve God in the responsibilities of our own Christian citizenship.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

THE GREAT LIE

Lesson for September 7, 1969

Background Scripture: 1 Samuel 8 through 12; 15; 16; 18:5-12; 28; 31:1-7.
Devotional Reading: Deuteronomy 17:14-17.

In a few short months the American people will go once again to the polls. In the interval between now and then the game of politics will command a lion's share of our national attention and energy. In the midst of all the color, noise and high spirits that have become so much a part of the American political scene, we are particularly vulnerable to a most dangerous deception. This deception goes far beyond what the various candidates will say about themselves, each other, the issues, or the parties.

"Thus Says The Lord . . ."

In Romans 1:25, Paul says: "because they exchanged the truth about God for a lie and served the creature rather than the Creator . . ." In other words, Paul is saying, we often deceive can grip our minds with explanations of God's truth, people who can help with deeds of kindness, and people with administrative ability to guide a church.

What is the challenge to you? If you have trusted Christ as a personal savior, your need is to take the gifts given you by God, use them for his glory, and cease looking enviously at what others are doing. Use your personal gifts for God's glory.

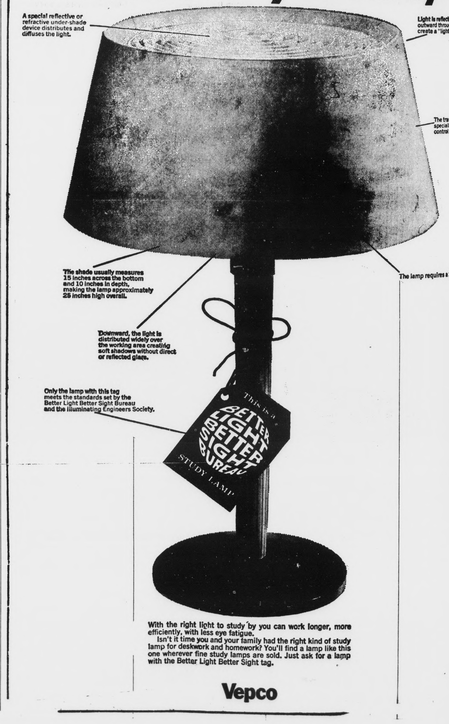
Study this lamp. You should have one like it wherever you study.



A special reflective or refractive under-shade device distributes and diffuses the light.
Light is reflected evenly outward through the shade, creating a "lighted ceiling."
The translucent specially engineered shade controls illumination.
The lamp requires a 200-watt bulb.
The shade usually measures 15 inches across the bottom and 10 inches at the top, making the lamp approximately 20 inches high overall.
Downward, the light is distributed widely over the working area creating soft shadows without direct or reflected glare.
Only the lamp with this tag meets the standards set by the Better Light Better Sight Bureau and the Illuminating Engineers Society.
STUDY LAMP

With the right light to study by you can work longer, more efficiently, with less eye fatigue.
Isn't it time you and your family had the right kind of study lamp for deskwork and homework? You'll find a lamp like this one wherever fine study lamps are sold. Just ask for a lamp with the Better Light Better Sight tag.

Human nature says, "It can't be done." But through inspiration says, "Overcome evil with good." Rom. 12:21. The first step in dealing with evil is to realize that we must face it and believe that we can overcome through the power of Christ. Evil becomes strong only as we cherish it. We allow there are thoughts suggested and aroused by Satan that are not even the best of men; and if they are not cherished, if they are repelled as hateful, the soul is not contaminated with guilt and is not defiled by their presence."—That I May Know Him, p. 340.

Pastor Is Woodcarver

The Reverend Floyd J. Wingfield, Sr., minister of Salem Methodist Church, Spout Spring, is a skilled woodcarver as this small sampling of his craftwork illustrates. The wooden chain is carved from one piece of wood. There's a carved snake on the table which wriggles realistically and the bird reproductions bring him special pleasure, says Mr. Wingfield. For Ronnie and Dennis Jones it's quite a goal to keep in mind — to be able to create such intricate objects from wooden blocks and twigs that someone else might simply throw away. The boys are sons of Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Jones, members of the congregation.

White Oak Grove

A beautiful day and a delightful crowd was enjoyed in the meeting of the Cornerstone Baptist Church Sunday School Union. Rev. T. M. Venerable, the president, was in charge.
